Cultivating Community

Brian Blackford, Ball State University; Darlesia Lee; Ceann Bales, Randolph County United; and Lisa Jennings, Community Foundation of Randolph County

Randolph County United and the Community Foundation of Randolph County have teamed up with Ball State University's Indiana Communities Institute to coordinate the Cultivating Community initiative. Together, with your help, we can tackle our community's most pressing issues. Randolph County is already a great place to live, and we have the opportunity to make it even better! All are welcome to join. After all, this is your community -- we are just here to provide guidance and support. The 5 initiatives that we will focus on are: Housing & Blight, Education, The Drug Epidemic, Quality of Life, and Broadband Infrastructure. If you are passionate about any of these issues, or just want to help, this is for you! The next action planning session will be held Thursday, August 19 from 5:00-8:00 p.m. at the Randolph County Fairgrounds Husted Hall. For more information, please visit our new website: www.randolphcountycultivatingcommunity.com

New Faces

Karen Dillow

Promise Indiana Randolph County Coordinator

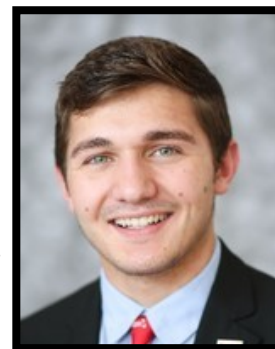

In April 2021, The Community Foundation welcomed Karen Dillow as the new Promise Indiana Randolph County Coordinator. Karen is a professional educator with over three decades of experience. She taught at Winchester Community High School and was an adjunct instructor for Ivy Tech Community College and Indiana University.

Karen moved to Randolph County in 1987. She and her husband Bill live in the Saratoga area and are members of Harrisville Congregational Christian Church. Karen spends her free time working on genealogy, camping, having lunch with friends, and doing volunteer work.

Communications Specialist

Luke Rowles has joined us as a Communications Specialist; this is made possible through funding from Lilly Endowment, Inc. GIFT VII Implementation Grant. He graduated from Jay County High School in 2015. Receiving his community's Lilly Scholarship, he went to Wabash College where he graduated Magna Cum Laude in 2019 with a liberal arts degree in social psychology and nonprofit business. Luke recently moved to Winchester where he was eager to get involved — he is a past intern for both The Portland Foundation and Henry County Community Foundation.

Luke and his wife love spending time with their dogs; taking walks and hiking. Luke also really enjoys golfing, and he's grown quite fond of our local club. He likes to travel and try new foods/drinks, and he finds great joy in spending time (movies, board games, and listening to music) with family and friends.

Luke Rowles

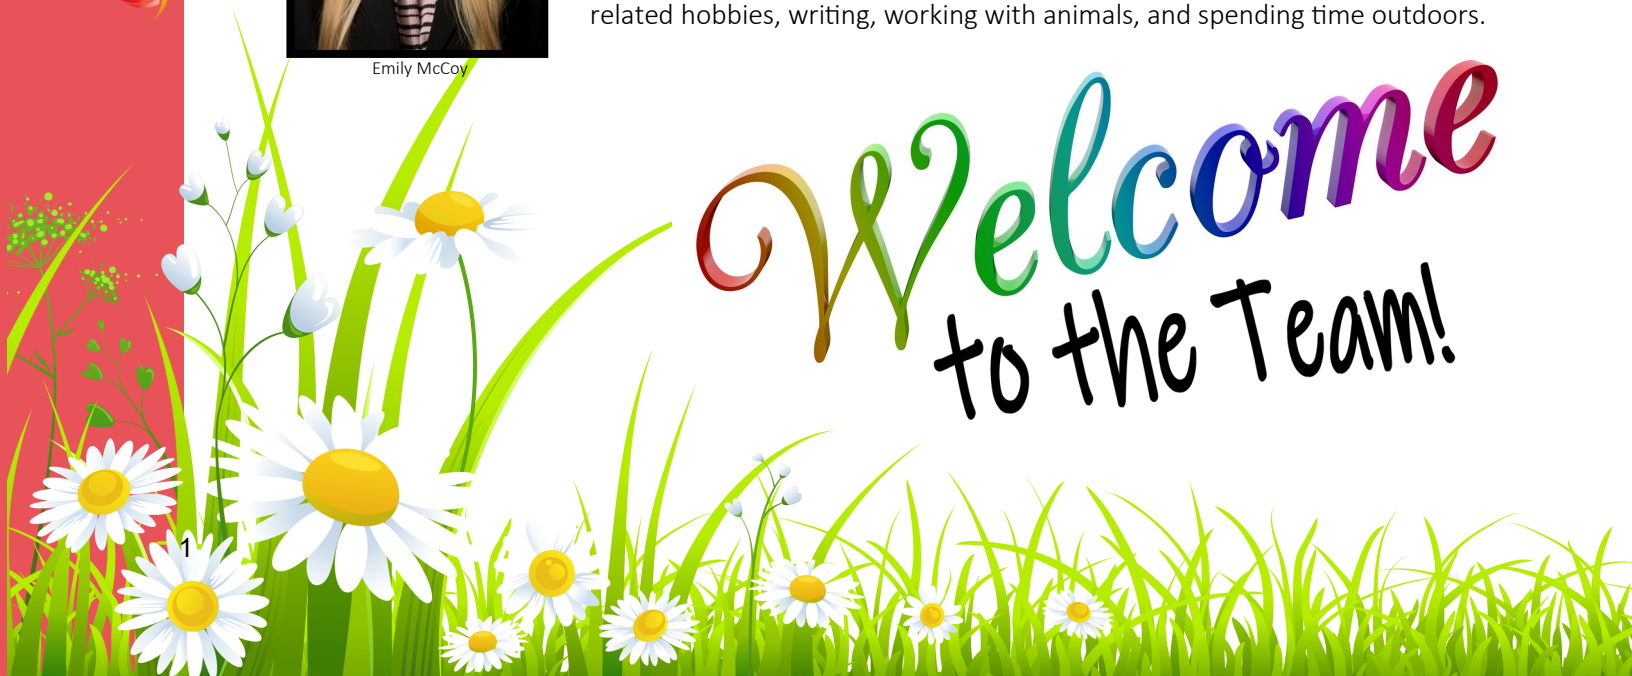

Emily McCoy

2021 Lilly Intern

In May of 2021, The Foundation welcomed Emily McCoy back for her second year as a summer intern. Emily is a 2019 graduate of Winchester Community High School and currently attends Ball State University. She recently began her senior year, majoring in Exercise Science with a concentration in Pre-Occupational Therapy. She plans to work toward her doctorate of OT at the University of Indianapolis and return to Randolph County to practice. Emily enjoys many music-related hobbies, writing, working with animals, and spending time outdoors.

Welcome to the Team!

Letter from Lisa

Dear Friends,

There is something special about our Randolph County community—the old downtowns, the pastures or woodlands, a get-it-done spirit, or an everyone-is-welcome ethic. Whether they are places, traditions, or attitudes, these community characteristics are the things that really matter to people. They draw people to a place and make them care about where they live. Such characteristics are a community's heart and soul. Communities that acknowledge and value their heart and soul are able to take action to strengthen it.

On our cover page, and since 2018, the Community Foundation of Randolph County has partnered with Randolph County United, to bring Ball State University's community development process, called Cultivating Community, to our residents. Cultivating Community is a highly inclusive process that engages residents in identifying what they love most about their communities, the future they want for it, and how to achieve it. The benefits are broad and long-lasting: civic pride and volunteerism increase, residents feel more connected to one another and to their municipal leaders, new leaders emerge, economic conditions improve, and towns become more resilient and better equipped to deal with emergencies like a pandemic.

Cultivating Community is a community engagement process that reconnects people with what they love most about their town and translates those personal and emotional connections into a blueprint that serves as the foundation for future community decisions. It is a barn-raising approach to community planning and development designed to increase participation in local decision-making and empower residents to shape the future of their communities in a way that upholds the unique character of each place. I encourage you to learn more about this wonderful program and how it can help strengthen the communities we love. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have questions about Cultivating Community and be sure to visit www.randolphcountycultivatingcommunity.com

Cultivating Community is one of many ways you can join us in serving others. Our Women's Fund has wonderful bunch and auction coming up, see page 6. Our Heroes Fund provides an opportunity for you recognize those we know or have known, who have made a difference just as Missy and Al Williams have done. We simply had to take a moment, on page 5 to celebrate Joyce Husmann. Joyce is our long-time friend who this year, is finishing up her 10th year of service on the foundation board! What an impact she has made and her commitment so unwavering, this is true heart and soul. Such a wonderful example of volunteerism, we thank you Joyce with all our heart! Inspiring Randolph County-Jammie Michael Scholarship Fund is such a heartwarming example of lifting our youth and raising awareness for children with dyslexia. What a great outreach with the goal giving back, see page 6.

Finally on the back cover is an exciting new field of interest fund in support of Education in Randolph County. Be sure to not miss out on the current dollar for dollar match on donations, your gift helps to secure additional funding. Supporting educational initiatives and teachers is the goal of this new fund.

One of the beautiful things about community is that small efforts can become big efforts, as more and more people rally around the needs of their neighbors. And at the Community Foundation of Randolph County, we have a great vantage point—we get to witness what happens when the small seeds of community, and seeds from you, our donors bear fruit. I hope you will consider donating to the causes highlighted in this newsletter and as we so appreciate your continued support. As we grow, so does our ability to help others. Thank you very much!

Lisa

Randolph County Heroes: Al & Missy Williams

Al and Missy Williams seem like they are Randolph County natives when you consider the impact they have had on this community. But instead, their residency began when first Al graduated college and came to teach at Winchester Community High School in 1975. Then Missy came to Winchester Community High School to teach in 1979. They met each other during their first teaching jobs, married, and decided to make Randolph County their home. Al taught social studies and coached track, basketball, and cross country. Missy also taught social studies and ended her career as Corporation Librarian/Media Specialist. She too coached basketball and cross country as well as volleyball and golf. They both sponsored clubs, departments and intramurals. After retirement, neither Missy nor Al have quit making impact on the lives of Randolph County residents. Al began serving on the Park Board under Mayor Shon Byrum.

Al helped, as a park board member, support the transformation of Goodrich Park, Beeson Park and the Beeson Club House. He and Missy spent time visiting other communities to attend their summer concert series. Al saw no reason Randolph County could not have the Concerts in the Park as well. He wrote grants, got sponsors, and developed a committee of band “groupies” who would help him scout out good talent for our concerts. Missy has run for political office and has served on both City and County Council, where she still serves. Missy has also served on the originating committee for Randolph County Promise and developed a third grade county-wide field trip celebrating the history of our county as well as encouraging participation in the Promise program. In May of 2018 she was hired as Community Development Director of Randolph Economic Development Corporation. As of January 2021, the REDC reorganized to include a county-wide Chamber of Commerce and Tourism under the name Randolph County United. Missy is now serving as Vice President of Business and Community Development of the Randolph County United. Thank you, Randolph Central, for hiring these two young teachers in the 1970’s, and thank you, Al and Missy, for making Randolph County home and a better place to live. You are truly Randolph County Heroes!

“About 25 years ago, I completed my student teaching experience at Winchester Community High School under Al Williams and Gary Horner. Al Williams was, even then, an innovative teacher who used a variety of effective teaching methods to reach students, resulting in very effective classroom management and high levels of student engagement. Twelve years later, when I returned to Winchester as Superintendent, Mr. Williams was still teaching, and I was able to see him finish his long teaching career at Winchester. Al Williams is truly one of Randolph Central’s best.” - Greg Hinshaw

“Missy does not stop, from the moment she begins her day to the moment she ends her day, promoting local businesses, school activities, and community activities on social media. I have a great deal of admiration for Missy and all she has done for Randolph County!” - Ceann Bales

“When one thinks about Randolph County Heroes, one has to think of The Williams’. They have done so much with their endeavors both in school and outside for their community.” -Mike Necessary

Now Available in Randolph County: Dolly Parton's Imagination Library

We're thrilled to share that Dolly Parton's Imagination Library is available in Randolph County. This incredible program mails free, high-quality, age-appropriate books to children from birth until age five, regardless of family income. Inspired by her father's inability to read or write, entertainment icon Dolly Parton founded the Imagination Library in 1995. The program started as a local effort in Dolly's home community, Sevier County, Tennessee, with the hopes of inspiring a love of reading and learning from a young age. The program became such a success that in 2000 a national replication effort began, growing the local program into an international movement.

Randolph County families with children younger than five years old can enroll in the book program by visiting www.invitedtoliveunited.org/dolly-partons-imagination-library

Foundation Spotlight

Joyce Husmann

Joyce Husmann has been a major supporter and volunteer at the Community Foundation since joining the Board of Directors in 2012. During her time as a math teacher and then guidance counselor in Union City, Joyce became familiar with the Foundation's Scholarship program and greatly appreciated the efforts being taken to further the education of Randolph County's students, including her two Lilly Endowment recipient children. Following her retirement, Joyce was happy to become more directly engaged with the Foundation, learning about the other programming we offer and forming personal connections with the inspiring young scholars receiving our awards. Since her decision to join the board, Joyce has made many impactful contributions, from promoting the Women's Fund and James & Linda Noffsinger Fund, to serving as the Chair of our Scholarship Committees from 2015 to the present. Having been raised in Bremen, IN and moving to Union City in 1974, Joyce brings a unique perspective to the Board, which is mainly composed of members born and raised in this community. Joyce feels that her involvement with the Foundation is just one more way she feels connected to the community she chooses to call home. She remains impressed with the deep and diverse reach of the Foundation's community support and continues to value our county-wide outreach approach. From her time on the Board, Joyce has met many of the behind-the-scenes volunteers working to better Randolph County, people that motivate her to continue making a difference through her roles at CFRC. She feels great admiration for her colleagues and friends on the Board, recognizing the variety of talents and passions they bring to the table. Joyce herself is an integral part of the Foundation, her dedication as an educator improving our programs and ensuring the continuation of a legacy. Thank you Joyce for everything you have done and continue doing for CFRC and our community!

“ According to Joyce, her desire to stay active and involved is partially inspired by her father. At the age of 96, he continues to serve his church and community, setting a wonderful example for Joyce just as she does for others here in Randolph County. ”

Inspiring Randolph County-Jammie Michael Scholarship Fund

Inspiring kids to work hard and do their best is a common theme among adults. We award their behavior with A's, provide patches to put on their jackets, disburse certificates of achievement, and applaud. Why wouldn't we? After all, they did work hard and do their best.

But, what about the other kids? The kids that hide in the back of the classroom praying the teacher does not call on them to read out loud. The kids that go to tutoring and educational camps instead of sports practice. The kids that cry every night while doing homework because it's just so overwhelming. The kids I am referring to are the kids with dyslexia. My kid. Me. These kids work just as hard, or harder, but earn the B's and C's. They are told their best is not good enough for the certificate or applause.

If these kids cannot read and write well enough to earn that A, what can they do? Well, here is a short list. High IQ, creative, problem solving, determined, empathetic, perseverance, grit, excellent comprehension of stories read to them, strong reasoning skills, and are often entrepreneurial. Their gifts are far too many to get them all in this article, but wouldn't you agree these qualities are great for employment? We need these kids working in the community, starting their businesses and giving back, not giving up.

You see, when their grades tank, so does their self-esteem. I have lived it and it is not a fun place to be. It's the goal of the Inspiring Randolph County – Jammie Michael Scholarship Fund to inspire, generate enthusiasm around learning, and letting these kids know their best is just right! They do deserve the applause and I want to give it to them in the form of this scholarship on awards night. I want them to stand tall when they hear their name and be proud of who they are and what they have to offer our community. Please join me in inspiring these kids. By the way, if you are interested in learning more about dyslexia, please visit the Dyslexia Institute of Indiana at www.diin.org. If you are affected by dyslexia or think someone you know might have it and want some guidance, I would love to help. I can be contacted at 765-546-1414.

The Community Foundation of Randolph County, Inc. has established the Randolph County Fund for Education to help address the needs of educators and education throughout the county and have challenged the community to help start this new fund. We know educational systems have struggled with meeting the needs of students during the pandemic. Finances may be even further stretched due to dwindling tax dollars. The Community Foundation supports education and we are challenging our community to give to a new endowed education fund to allow for support of educational endeavors now and for years to come.

Education grants will be made from this fund to assist the needs of education in Randolph County. We are very excited about this new fund and hope the community will share our enthusiasm. With this matching gift campaign, your gift today can go twice as far and make twice the impact. Please join us in support of Education.
